Discussion Topics:

This is an introductory course aimed at exploring the questions and issues shaping our current educational contexts. Through readings and other media sources, students will be asked to reflect on and critically analyze and discuss the purpose of education and being educated, the messages embedded in educational environments and to consider future possibilities for education. Students will also have the opportunity to reflect on their own educational experiences and consider alternative ways that teaching and learning can occur. Information, questions and concepts will be shared through written and verbal exchanges, group discussions and presentations.

This is a writing intensive course. Therefore, in addition to the course assignments, students will be asked to engage in in-class writing exercises to enhance their learning of the content as well as develop their writing skills.
